CALLOUS CANNIBAL.

Heinous Crime Confessed by Alfred G. Packer, Now Jailed at Denver.

Who Lived for Sixty Days Upon the Flesh of his Five Murdered Companions.

While With a Prospecting Party in Southern Colorado, in the Winter of 1874.

Unparalleled Tale of Starvation and Suffering in the New Populous San Juan Country.

Packer's Confession.
DENVER, March 17.—Alfred G. Packer, one of the most noted murderers of the 19th century has produced, arrived at Denver last night, and is now lodged in the county jail. Packer has been lost sight of nine years, but his heinous crime has not. He went to Wyoming territory last fall and settled near Fort Fetterman, going under the name of Schwartz, and engaged in ranching and prospecting.

We crossed the mountains and were already given. Packer, it must be remembered, in the winter of 1873 and 1874, murdered five of his companions in the San Juan country, and for some days lived off their flesh. At a late hour last night Packer made the following confession to General Adams:

"I, Alfred Packer, desire to make a true and voluntary statement in regard to the occurrences in southern Colorado in the winter of 1873 and 1874. I wish to make it to Adams because I have made one to him once before about the same matter. When we left Ouray camp we had about seven days' food for one man. We traveled on three days and a storm came on us; we came to a mountain, crossed the gulch, came to another mountain, followed the snow so deep that we followed the mountain on top, and the fourth day had only a pint of flour left. We followed the mountain and came to the main range. Do not remember how many days we were traveling then, but think about ten, living on rosebuds and pine gum, and some of the men were crying and praying. Then we came over the main range and camped on a stream near where Lake City now stands, a fork of the Gunnison which runs into Big lake, and at San Juan, the second night, just above the lake. Next morning we crossed the lake and cut holes in the ice to catch fish, but there were no fish, so we tried to catch snails. The ice was thin and some broke through. We crossed the lake and went into a grove of timber. All the men were crying, and one of them, crier, swan asked me to go up and see if I could not see something from the mountains. I took gun and went up the hill and found a big rose bush with the buds sticking through the snow, but could see nothing but snow all around. I had been a kind of a guide to them, but I did not know that with the exceptions below named and recommend that you accept 228 miles of said road, less and exclusive of sixty-eight miles of the line of said New Orleans, Baton Rouge and Vicksburg railroad, extending from New Orleans to White Lake, between New Orleans and Shreveport, to which sixty-eight miles the New Orleans and Pacific road has withdrawn its right to receive lands under the Twenty-second section of such act, and that patents for such lands as may have been issued by construction and have been issued to the New Orleans and Pacific railroad exclusively, nevertheless, of the lands along said sixty-eight miles, on their compliance with the law and regulations in such cases made and provided. The patents will of course be subject to rights acquired by any person or corporation by the act of March 3, 1871. The president-to-day returned the papers in the case, with his approval of the recommendation made by the secretary. This action, in favor of the New Orleans and Pacific railroad, now owned and operated by the Pacific railroad company, is final.
